++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining cold for most.

Today:
Many parts dry with sunny spells, though cold, with low cloud and some freezing fog affecting central and southern England. Turning cloudy and windy across Scotland and Northern Ireland with rain moving eastwards, preceded by snow in places.

Tonight:
Patchy rain moving southwards from Scotland into northern England, with wintry showers affecting northern Scotland. Frosty in the south with freezing fog patches.

Sunday:
Windy in the north with rain moving eastwards, heavy on western hills, and turning milder. Dry in the south but remaining cold, with freezing fog patches slow to clear.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Cloudy and rather mild with rain at times across southern and central parts. Some rain and hill snow at times in the north, but with dry and cold conditions too.
